Introduction

Actively contributing to the advancement of knowledge and the development of skills to improve healthcare is the mission of the Faculty of Medicine at the Université de Montréal.

To fulfill this mission, the Department of Pharmacology and Physiology is committed to training the leading researchers of tomorrow. As a true incubator for scientific excellence, our Department offers weekly seminars throughout the academic year, featuring renowned researchers from Canada and around the world who present their latest discoveries. We believe it is essential to broaden our students' horizons and expose them to research being conducted beyond our own institution. To do so, we rely on the financial support of our valued partners.

Each year, the Department also organizes the Gabriel L. Plaa Research Days, an event that provides a dynamic forum for discussion, knowledge sharing and intellectual stimulation. In keeping with our mission, this event gives our graduate students and postdoctoral fellows an opportunity to share their research experiences and represents a key component of their academic training. Their work is evaluated by a panel of judges, and they present the progress of their research to their peers, faculty members and staff. The event concludes with the presentation of awards recognizing research excellence and outstanding academic achievement, followed by a cocktail reception. Without the generous contributions of our partners, we would not be able to offer this event free of charge to our students or provide them with meaningful awards. Nearly 200 people participated in the most recent edition, and we are committed to continuing to make this event a success.

2026-2027 Objective : 25 000 $

We invite you to review our visibility plan on the following pages to learn how your institution can benefit from a partnership with our Department.

Visibility

The Department of Pharmacology and Physiology has more than 100 faculty members on campus and in our seven affiliated research centers, as well as some 30 national and international guest speakers at our weekly seminars. It is also 45 postdoctoral fellows, 267 students enrolled in our graduate programs and 313 students enrolled in the bachelor's degree in biomedical sciences. Our Department also offers a window on the entire international community through our presence on various networks: website, LinkedIn. Our Partnership plan offers you the opportunity to position your institution with the scientific elite in the field of pharmacology, clinical pharmacology, physiology and biomedical engineering.

By partnering with our Department, your organization has a unique opportunity to demonstrate its commitment to advancing scientific research and graduate education, while strengthening its visibility within a dynamic academic and research community.

As a valued partner of the Gabriel L. Plaa Research Days, you will have the opportunity to engage directly with the Department's professors, researchers and clinicians, as well as with graduate students and staff. This exceptional event provides a unique setting for meaningful exchanges, professional networking and relationship building with the next generation of highly qualified scientific professionals.

We also invite you to take an active role in this flagship research event by joining the judging panel or presenting scholarships and awards during the awards ceremony. Your participation helps recognize and encourage emerging researchers while highlighting your organization's commitment to scientific excellence and the development of future talent.

The following pages present the sponsorship opportunities available. We invite you to select the package that best aligns with your organization's objectives and complete the form on page 9.
